Design your own rugby strip

Invent your own ball game

Imagine you've gone to an alien planet. The aliens really want to learn about Earthling culture, so they ask you to teach them a game. But you realise that you can't remember the rules to any of the games you know! You only have half an hour to invent a whole new ball game to teach the aliens.

You need to decide:

- At least five rules (including how to score!)
- How the teams work (how many players are there? What positions do they play?)
- How long the game lasts
- What the pitch looks like (Draw this out below!)
- The name of the game!

Bonus activity: If there was a World Cup for your game, what would the trophy look like?

Make a timeline of rugby

All the dates and important events of rugby have got jumbled up. Can you match the right event to the right year, and put them in order?

1823	Rugby splits into League (paid) and Union (unpaid)
1845	A similar game was perhaps played - maybe with heads!
1991	Rugby gets an official set of rules
1883	First Rugby Union World Cup
1895	The first Six Nations
1907	The first Women's Rugby World Cup
1954	A pupil at Rugby school named Ellis decided to pick up the ball and run during a game of football, and a new game was born
1982	Australia and New Zealand join the League
1987	First international women's game
Prehistory	First Rugby League world cup

Caption Competition

Add your own captions to these illustrations. Don't forget to colour them in!

Complete the quotes!

Make your own top trumps

Below are six cards. On each of them, draw a member of your very own imaginary rugby team. Underneath, you will give them scores from 1-5 in different categories.

The categories are: Speed, Strength, Footwork, Tackling, Agility

When you have created your deck, pair up with the person next to you and play a game of Top Trumps.

Top Trumps rules: The first player picks a category they would like to play - for example, Speed. They would put their top card down and say what score their card has in that category. If the other player has a higher number in that category, they win the turn and keep the cards. If they have a lower number, they lose the turn and player one keeps the cards. The objective is to win all the cards.

The image shows six blank card templates arranged in a 2x3 grid. Each card is a rounded rectangle with a thin green border. Inside each card is a smaller, empty square, intended for drawing a rugby player. The cards are completely blank, ready for a user to create their own imaginary rugby team and assign scores.
